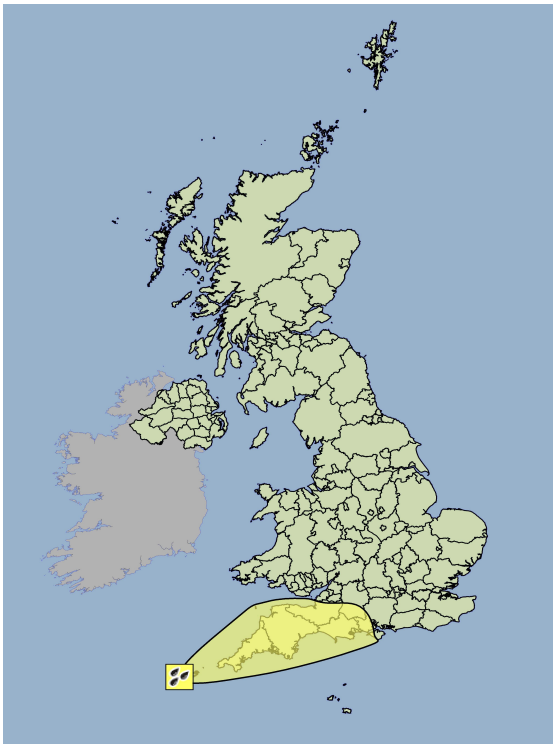
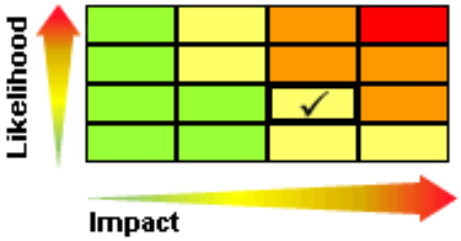
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Active frontal troughs will move eastwards across the UK during Friday, a combination of mild, moisture laden air and occasionally strong winds bringing further rain to many places.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 00:10 on Fri, 24th Jan 2014 until 23:45 on Fri, 24th Jan 2014

Bands of rain are expected to move eastwards across southwest England during Friday. Rainfall accumulations of 10 to 20 mm are expected over most parts, with 30 mm or more likely over parts of North Cornwall. With the ground saturated over much of the region, the public should be aware of the risk of further local flooding and associated disruption.
